Undergraduate Minor in International Studies

The Minor in International Studies provides undergraduate students with the opportunity to include an international dimension in their academic major. This interdisciplinary minor offers flexible course selection outside of the major and encourages students to understand social, political, economic and cultural contrasts throughout the world.

Students will structure their minor from three clusters of courses and learning experiences encompassing International Decision Making (6 credit hours), International Environment (9 credit hours) and International Experience (3 credit hours). In addition, each student must complete 10 credit hours of a foreign language or demonstrate proficiency through examination. International students will be exempt from the International Experience but the 3-credit hours must be achieved through other course work on the minor list.

International Experience (3 Credit Hours)

Each student must have an international experience. This will typically be in the form of a Study Abroad program, foreign internship, or Foreign Service Learning program. Additionally, this requirement can be met through a non-credit international experience of at least four weeks in length. If any of the above items are for non-credit activity, the 3 credit hours must be obtained through enrollment in any of the above approved courses. International students will be exempt from this requirement but must achieve the 3 credit hours through other options available.

Foreign Language Requirement (10 credit hours or equivalent)

Each student must complete the equivalent of 10 semester hours of a single foreign language (defined as a language that is not the student’s native language). Students with established proficiency may be exempted by examination. Information on examinations may be obtained from the Office of Testing and Evaluation or the Foreign Language Laboratory.

- International students are exempted from this requirement.
- Students may count language coursework taken to meet requirements for their major or other programs.
